TURKS & CAICOS Windsong Resort, A member of Preferred Hotels & Resorts

Over the last few years, Turks and Caicos has become a haute destination loved for its luxury hotels amidst uncrowded beaches, crystal-clear waters, and vibrantly-colored reefs. Only 8 of the country's 40 small islands and cays are inhabited, giving Turks and Caicos its far-removed air. Providenciales, locally known as "Provo", is the most well known of the Turks and Caicos islands; and offers a bevy of elegant outdoor restaurants and impressive resorts. The Windsong Resort on Providenciales is a tropical sanctuary encompassing incredible panoramic views and wildlife (don't be surprised if you spot a sea turtle while dining at the café). The resort sits on a prime spot in Grace Bay and features 53 rooms along the beach. The idyllic island has sparked a new trend for vacationers, in which a professional photographer takes their portrait on the beach. JAMAICA Half Moon, A RockResort

Americans fell in love with Jamaica in the mid 1950s and development started going up pretty quickly around the island. Montego Bay became a fashionable destination and reggae music ruled. Today, the 400-acre resort continues to have major appeal with its key location on a private two-mile beach, 197 spacious rooms, and exceptional service. A spinning studio, equestrian center, and 54 swimming pools are just some of their cool perks, along with a whimsical children's village for the little ones to frolic in when they're not on the beach with you. halfmoon.rockresorts.com

As a trendy playground for the rich and famous, St. Barts is probably on your vacation bucket list. NEVIS
Montpelier Plantation & Beach

If you want to get lost in the Caribbean without going into survival mode, head to Nevis—where the vibe is soothing and secluded, you'll find long stretches of empty beaches, and the scenery is a Technicolor fantasy. The small, almost perfectly round island inhabits just one main road that has been used for centuries, a rainforest within the clouds, and old plantation ruins. Hideaway at The Montpelier Plantation & Beach, a 19-room boutique hotel set in an 18th-century sugar plantation surrounded by 60 acres of lush gardens. The property's open design was planned to allow guests to move between the rooms and the outside so that they can feel connected to the rich blues and greens of the island. Each guestroom is individually decorated offering the sense of a beach house, yet the Relais & Chateaux hotel branding provides upscale attention and details.
